

Ensure your charter buses are registered properly with help from J. J. Keller® experts

Your charter bus company is no longer exempt from IRP.
(Effective 1/1/16.)

What are my options for compliance?

Compliance can be handled by obtaining permanent IRP credentials for your charter buses; by getting trip permits on a per-trip, per-vehicle basis; or by a combination of both. How you approach compliance depends on the nature of your operation and the extent of your interstate operations.

PROS:	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Allows buses to travel freely in all 59 IRP jurisdictions (lower 48 states, Washington, D.C. and 10 Canadian provinces) without additional registration credentials• No need for trip permits• Can gather records electronically with GPS/ELDs• If already licensed for IFTA, can share mileage data	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• No audit risk• If interstate trips are infrequent, trip permits can be a cost-effective method for compliance• Quick and easy to obtain through Keller-Permits® Service• No mileage recordkeeping requirements
CONS:	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Extensive mileage recordkeeping, if tracking on paper, requires forms, driver training, filing, etc.• Increased audit risk• Potential need for additional employee(s) to manage mileage/trip data	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• If interstate trips are frequent, can be costly• Obtaining multiple permits for multiple vehicles is time-consuming if done in house• Jurisdictions may limit the number of permits issued

Let us help you determine the best option and ease your compliance burden

We can monitor your routes and advise you if your fleet would be better served by permanent IRP credentials or temporary trip permits. Should you choose IRP, we can even help you determine in which jurisdiction you should register.

Whichever option you choose, you'll be in good hands with J. J. Keller. Our Vehicle Services staff has an average of 10 years of service and is very knowledgeable in the regulations. Plus, our well-established relationships with state agencies and extensive tag agent network allow us to provide you with the best possible service.

IRP even applies to school buses in some situations.
